ECONOMY CRY IS CALLED BUNKUM

Democrats Hoot At Schemes for Saving Money.

GOVERNOR'S CHANGE OF FACE

Two Years Ago, When It Was Good Politics to Do So, the Governor De-nounced the Legislature for Extrava-gance, and Yet the Present Assem-bly Has Exceeded the Former Mark by a Cool Half Million.

Indianapolis special: Because they exceeded the appropriations of two years ago by only $500,000—a cool half million of dollars—the Democrats in the 1911 legislature are tickled all over. Yet the Democratic governor, when he signed the appropriation bill two years ago, denounced the measure as extravagant and scored the Democratic house of that year for running wild on appropriations. It is true he forced the Democratic house at that time to cut off a million from the bill.

But where was he when the measure ran half a million over the so-called extravagant mark of two years back? Has he changed, now that the mid-term election is over and now that the need for what he calls economy is passed, politically? Republicans are willing to admit that Democrats are doing well to come within a million of a business administration. At the same time, the Republicans can see in the appropriations bill nothing to indicate that the Democratic banko campaign cry of economy is being worked out in law.

Hooted at Economy. There has been little fussing over the appropriations this year. The Republicans have not been in a position to make their protests count. While they have gone through the fight and have tried to cut down the state's ex-penses where possible, their efforts met with united opposition on the part of the Democrats, who hooted at schemes of saving money and rode rough shod in the house over all pro- posals for cutting off extras.

Now that it is up to the Democratic senate to handle the appropriations bills, it is not likely that there will be any cuts. In fact, with Steve Fleming as main figure on the senate finance committee and in charge of the state's expenditures, it is likely that the senate will add to, rather than subtract from the allowances already made. In fact, Fleming is playing hard for some petty grabs of his own that may add to the half million excess already ap-pro-priated by the house.

One of the small grabs proposed by Fleming is a school for librarians, which will cost the state $5,000 to start, but goodness knows how much to keep going in the future. The game is to get the hand in the public pocket. One grab sets a precedent, and after that the cry would be a regular one and never ending.

Needed For His Friends. Now there is no need at all for a lib-rarians' school separate from the state institutions for education that al-ready are prepared to handle the propo-sition. In fact, the University of In-diana already cares for all the persons who desire training along the lines of librarianship. But Fleming thinks he knows what he wants for some of his friends, and he is trying his best to force through an appropriation. He is also demanding more money for the state librarian, and declares he will tack this increase on the bill in the senate.

The affiliations of the state libran-ian, Demarchus Brown, are such that both Fleming and his governor are anxious to do what they can—with the people's money—to propitiate and please said powerful affiliations. It may be that Fleming will be able to force his favorite's salary upward. It is said, too, that Fleming will try to have the salaries of some of his faith-ful henchmen in the public accounting board boosted beyond the old figures.

There is a queer thing about this man Fleming. He is the real dictator in Indiana. The state has reached a strange pass when the president of an association of brewers can shape its destinies politically and in a legisla-tive way. And yet here we are, and Fleming is the boss.

The house committee was actually afraid to report unfavorably on
